without too much risk of accomplices; it is far better, however, when you have stunned your man to get away as quickly as pos-sible and inform some friendly policeman or other custodian of the peace of what has happened.

All this only applies when you are attacked by a single individual. Always avoid an attack by a number of roughs, even at the cost of having to show them a clean pair of heels. If you cannot escape, single out the biggest and strongest and get the first blow if you can—often if the champion is knocked down at starting all the others run off or sliuk away like whipped eurs.

Some Funny Instances Which May or May Not Be True.

The Lewiston man who swallowed a phyician's atomizer the other day has had many sympathizers, says the Lewiston ournal. An impecunious wretch who acosted him said : "That's nothing. I swallowed a brick block in 10 cent drinks." The remark was old, but the accompanying reuest for a 10 cent loan was new.

A jeweller in Lisbou street, who is trust vorthy and will back this over his signature, says he knows a man in Lewiston who swallowed a large piece of iron, very large, dimensions not given, but so large that it almost destroyed his equilibrium, and when he lay down this bit of hardware rolled around internally in accompaniment to his own turnings.

It was with him for years, gradually absorbing, until, presto change! it was gone, a masterly piece of digestion without doubt. No affidavit accompanies this story of the evaporation of cold iron, but it would be evaporation of cold fron, but it would be no injury to its good effects if there were. The meanest trick that the epiglottis has done of late, however, is to an Auburn store keeper, who was about to open store the other day and held the key, a very small one, in his mouth for a moment.
